GETTING AROUND PHUKET

The main roads on Phuket are generally in good condition with road signs in both Thai and English. If you drive in south Thailand outside Phuket, you'll notice most signs are in Thai only. The main road between north (airport) and Phuket Town have been improved during the last 1-2 years and is now finished. In case you don't know: In Thailand you DRIVE ON THE LEFT SIDE! If you plan to rent a motorbike or car, don't forget to acquire an international driver's license in your country before you arrive to Thailand. The police in Patong only enforce the helmet law and have checkpoint at the corner Bangla road and Rat-Uthit road almost daily between 17:00 and 20:00, but the last few months they have often been at the beach road and Sawadit Road during daytime which makes it hard to know when they will show up. Due to this, many people and taxi drivers began to wear helmets all the time. Outside Patong, Kathu and Phuket Town police also enforce the driver's license law and only a Thai - or international driver's license is valid in Thailand. The fine is 200-500 baht depending on police district and what rules you are breaking. (In Patong, they mostly charge you 300 baht for not wearing a helmet.)
